20-Oct-11 02:49 | mamabear_ca

That's the theory anyway. @Drjen4kids @MilkWhisperer #Lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:49 | BreastfeedingNY

@BreastfeedingNY Right... so, to prevent spinal cord malformations mommas take folate, and take TOO much, causing other probs... hmm #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:49 | MilkWhisperer

"too much" to mom via supplement & now SB no longer risk, but we've messed w/other midline development. @Drjen4kids @MilkWhisperer #Lcchat

@mamabear_ca Ah, who needs to work. :) LOL #LCchat

20-Oct-11 02:47 | NurturedChild

@DesirreAndrews No standards recommends because of no standard babies. Depends on rationale for bottles #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:47 | FeedYourBaby

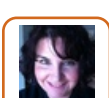

@DesirreAndrews baby-led bottle feeding makes a big difference, not so much of a flow preference, and easier to get back to breast #LCchat

20-Oct-11 02:47 | NurturedChild

@nurturedchild will try - between LC conferences & social media conferences, I feel like I hardly have time to do, you know, work #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:46 | mamabear_ca

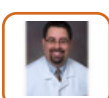

@DrGhaeri I do like your recommendations #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:46 | DesirreAndrews

@DrGhaeri I mean if a baby is in the first week or two and transitioning to the breast from bottle feeding mom pumping #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:45 | DesirreAndrews

@DesirreAndrews My recs are to allow a child to wean him/herself, even if it's socially inappropriate. Nature dictates timing => #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:45 | DrGhaeri

@MilkWhisperer Too little folate interferes with neural crest cell migration, causes problems including cleft lip/palate, not tongue #Lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:44 | Drjen4kids

@JeanetteIBCLC Just needing clarification of theory re TT: Too much folate or not enough? #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:42 | MilkWhisperer

@JeanetteIBCLC but I figure whatever the Dr prefers is what's safest and we don't have endless options for release referrals anyway #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:42 | mamabear_ca

I often see sucking blisters on lips with both posterior tongue-tie and lip-tie, and/or lips are blanched after feeding. #LCchat

20-Oct-11 02:36 | MilkWhisperer

@BreastfeedingNY according to my good friend wikipedia, the vagus nerve is a part of neural crest, so makes sense. #LCchat

20-Oct-11 02:36 | JeanetteIBCLC

Far out! @Drjen4kids the mechanism is more likely folate effects neural crest cell migration. See defects wherever crest cells go. #Lcchat

So many theories, research in the works. Gotta be a reason for more TT, beyond just increased knowledge #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:22 | FeedYourBaby

@MilkWhisperer Wait, I said that wrong. Apoptosis is when cells die via "intentional" programming. #LCchat

20-Oct-11 02:22 | JeanetteIBCLC

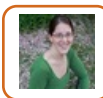

@callmecass Well, if it's a theory that holds water, I'm sure there will be references eventually... I AM seeing more TT's... #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:22 | MilkWhisperer

Recent client had baby with possible posterior TT - the sneaky, questionable kind. Needed better way to explain what I saw to refer. #lcchat

20-Oct-11 02:22 | callmecass

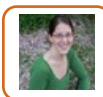

@MilkWhisperer The idea is that folic acid helps decrease erroneous apoptosis (cleft palate, for instance). #LCchat
